

From the Editor-In-Chief

MICHELLE E. MAJEWSKI Marian University

Welcome to the second volume of the JHSE. Please note we recently moved from publishing issues three times per year to a rolling publication format, which will allow for a much more timely and dynamic publication of articles. If you have signed up for a free subscription to the JHSE, you will receive notices each time new articles are added to the website. Those who have not yet registered can do so on the JHSE homepage.

I am pleased to announce an important article by Jerome H. Kahan in which he discusses the evolution of homeland security and the plethora of factors affecting development of an official definition. His article provides rationale concerning the need for a useful definition of homeland security and also a homeland security lexicon. Jim Ramsay, author of the second article being published at this time, makes a case for why outcomes-based accreditation makes sense for homeland security programs. A textbook review by Linda Kiltz will be uploaded to this website in the next several days so please watch for it.

We welcome your input and suggestions and look forward to hearing from you. Interested authors are encouraged to submit manuscripts, textbook reviews and commentaries electronically to jhseeditor@marianuniversity.edu.
